

Invest in Yourself and Your Business with Continuous Education

In our most recent podcast episode, Kevin Marcano, owner of Marcano Roofing in Salem, OR, shares how he and his entire company are thriving with the help of continuous education (listen here Air Vent Podcast). This ongoing learning is not limited to “roofing” knowledge. Marcano is committed to learning about a variety of topics he is passionate about including leadership, influence, emotional intelligence and persuasion.

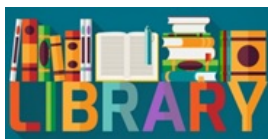

At Air Vent, we’re committed to offering you a variety of easily accessible continuous education opportunities – centered around collecting and sharing what we’ve learned from you. This includes success stories, tips and mistakes to avoid. Here are a few examples we hope you’ll take advantage of.

Our seminars are virtual for the first time since their 1998 kickoff. The same practical residential attic ventilation information to help you in the field. Register here Air Vent Seminar Schedule

Each month Air Vent University releases: a brand new Lesson Plan with timely topics you’re facing on the job, a fun 5-Question Pop Quiz (regardless of your report card you could win a cool prize), and an “Airing It Out with Air Vent” podcast episode. Visit our online campus here AVU

We have an entire digital library of articles featuring interviews with your roofing professional peers across North America. Topics include getting homeowner’s insurance to pay to bring attic ventilation up to code, overcoming homeowners’ price resistance when they don’t understand the scope of work differences, and installation methods that cause callbacks.
